DIVORCE AGAINST A VETERAN WIDOW. Family "Confusion Worse Confounded." A WIFE CAUGHT IN DISHABILLE WITH HER GALLANT.

She Confesses to an Operation for Abortion. A GRO M OF TWENTY AND A BRIDE OF PORTY. THE ROMANCE OF THE "MILEY WAY."

The judicial machinery for divorce is in constant operation before the courts of our city, whose record il ustrates every variety of phase of discordant ma-trimonial life. A full publication of all these cases, as they occur, would reflect the social life as it exists around us, more completely than any other single class of issues presented for legal adjudication. But their voluminous number alone would be suffi-cient, to forbid us from thinking to find space for them within the limits of this paper. We are therefore compelled to select only such as from time to time transpire, that offer the most salient features for instruction and reflection. One of these marked cases is at present pending before the Superior Court of this city, involving a strange and decidedly original combination of interest. The principal parties to it sustain to each other not only very eccentric household relations, but the whole story is comprised of that rare mixture of the grave and lively, the serious and comic sides of life, that would seem possible only in the fermentation of a cosmopolitan capital. A leading star in the drama is a young man, about twenty-four years of age, now an official in the general post-office in this city, and named John Hassett. trai post-office in this city, and named John Hassett.

This young man is the complainant in the action, prosecuting his wife for divorce on the ground of adultery. The wife thus prosecuted is about twice the age of the complaining husband, or, in the language of the prosecution, she is "old enough to be his mother." This interesting couple were married in this city on the 4th of May, 1860, when the bridehis mother." According to the papers on file in the suit before us, she has "always done business on her own account," has a flattering sum in hess on her own account," has a flattering sum in bank, and appears to be one of those healthy crinoline operators in the market, whose robust types may be seen any day in Fulton and Washington markets. While thus driving her prosperous milk traffic, this lady's first husband died. At this time Mr. John Hassett, husband number two and the complete was the complete with the complete was the complete with the complete was the complete with the complete was the complete was the complete with the complete was the c complainant, was yet a boy at school. The youth's parents living in close proximity to the milk-dealing widow, this lady had observed the boy, and noted, morever, the brightness of his parts and his visible educational attainments. She felt lonely in the solitude of her bereavement, and longed for conjugal society. But especially did she feel, from from the defectiveness of her own education, the want of some trusty aid, in the charge and manage-ment of her business accounts. She, therefore, fixed her tender yet sagacious eye upon the neighboring school boy, John Hassett, and by a few efforts of well-timed diplomacy, induced him to visit her, on the pretence of wanting him to write up her business. the pretence of wanting him to write up her business the pretence of wanting him to write up her business accounts. The boy, obviously flattered by these complimentary overtures to his intelligence, yielded to the mik-woman's invitation, and began that series of visits for the purpose of "casting up the widow's accounts," without any apparent suspicion of the actual quality of the

The "fancy" seem to have quietly steppyd into the background and given way to the more aristocratic style of stealing-fixietion key, "jummies," bludgeons, and the tools of the craft are rusting, and the fancy style of thieving in the shape of evindling, embezzlements and frands are becoming quite the race. It's quite an event of the property style style the property style are rusting, and the fancy style of thieving in the shape of swindling, embearlements and france are becoming quite the rage. It's quite an easy way of becoming notorious, since the general impression is, and is pretty correct, too, that notoriety is about all they can get. The condign penalties of the law, it is thought, won't come down very heavy on them; indeed, it has got to be nearly the rule that the bigger the pile that is stokes, the milder the punishment given. Acting upon this principle, and going in for a good haul, an ingensous swindle has undoubtedly been carried to all the principle, and going in for a good haul, an ingensous swindle has undoubtedly been carried to give the proposition of the parties, mainly destillers, for a long time, by means of which is all probability a large fortune for each has been secured. PLANTATION BITTERS. PLANTATION BITTERS.

This splendid Toule is now used by all clauses of people for every symptom of a "Stemach out of order." And particularly do these Bitters serve the purpose of those who "live out of doors," and are exposed to Changes of Weather, Raw Spring Winds and Weakening Summer Heat.

The secret of it is this: Plantation Bitters are certain to correct the jutions of the Stopach, set all its michinery at work and snable it to resist and throw off the approaching danger. The tendency of the operations of Nature is always towards a cure; all she needs is a little assistance at the proper time. How much more reasonable and sensible it us to help her along with a gentle, yet powerful Toule than to delays and weaken and definet her curstive processes with poisonous drugs and fary mixtures, which only stupely and plant the seeds of disease and death.

Criminal Items,

In the Kentucky Supreme Court, at Louisville, last week, a case was argued involving the power of a jailor to punish prisoners for disorderly conduct by flogging. The Judge said that whilst the old English authorities gave the jailor power to inflict punishment for the misconduct of a prisoner, this question had never been decided, so far as he could hnd, in the United States. He ruled that the jailor had no right to inflict corporeal punishment.
